PERSEVERANCE.

One step and then another,
And the longest walk is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the largest rent is mended;
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

So the little coral workers,
By their slow and constant motion,
Have built those pretty islands
In the distant dark-blue ocean,
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath conceived,
By oft-repeated efforts
Have been patiently achieved.

Then do not look disheartened
On the work you have to do,
And say that such a mighty task
You never can get through;
But just endeavor day by day
Another point to gain,
And soon the mountain which you feared
Will prove to be a plain!

"Rome was not builded in a day,"
The ancient proverb teaches,
And Nature, by her trees and flowers,
The same sweet sermon preaches.
Think not of far-off duties,
But of duties which are near.
And having once begun to work,
Resolve to persevere.

Cousin Edith.

Lillian Ames stood leaning against the casement of an open window leading on to a sloping lawn, at whose base flowed a sunny, rippling stream of water.

It was one of England's fairest daughters. Even at this moment, spite of the fact that her brow is gathered in a frown, and the red, full lips are unmistakably pouting, her beauty is undeniable

A few bold spirits had declared that there was little soul in the face; but the large hazel eyes could melt or flash at will; the dark lashes shaded a cheek as white as Parian marble, with rarely even a touch of color upon its velvety surface; and the lithe, graceful figure even unconsciously assumed a new grace in each unsteady poise, until one forgot the question of soul in its perfect outward flesh and blood tabernacle.

Near her, reclining on a low easy chair, sat a young girl of about her own age. At first glance the exquisite soul-loveliness of her face paled in Miss Ames's brilliant beauty, but there were more to love its possessor, and fewer to envy her. Something like imagination was in her voice, as she addressed her friend.

"I cannot believe that you mean it, Lillian," she said. "You have been engaged to Oscar Dering for a year, and how can you say so carelessly that your engagement shall be broken—"

"Beg pardon!" interrupted the other, in low, ironical tones, "I have not yet been engaged to Oscar Dering twenty-four hours. It was to Lord Oscar Dering I gave my pledge."

"Oh, but Lillian, because he has lost title and estate must he also lose the woman of his love? Think a minute. You surely will not give him up so easily?

"Nonsense, Edith! I am 21—no longer a girl of an age to live upon sentimentalism, but to look upon every-day realities of life. When I engaged myself to Lord Dering; I was the subject of congratulation among all my friends. Now that the cousin who was supposed to be dead crops into life in some remote portion of the globe, and that Oscar insists upon renouncing the property in his behalf without even a struggle, I am not content to let these same congratulations lapse into pity."

"Oh, Lillian, do you think anyone could pity you for possessing so royal a gift as the love of such a man? Think better of it, dear; I know you care for him. Do not so lightly renounce young life's happiness."

"You plead his case eloquently, my dear. Really I did not know I possessed a rival in my fair cousin. Perhaps a heart caught in the rebound—you know the rest, of course, and can point the moral."

"Lillian, you are cruel—cruel!—I—" But the late speaker had passed through the window out of hearing, and advanced to meet a man quickly approaching on the green sward, while the young girl left behind fell back in her chair, the great tears coursing down her cheeks, on which the crimson color signal flamed.

It was as though some ruthless hand had snatched the veil from her own heart, leaving exposed its most cherished secret—a secret she had not known herself until now betrayed by her shame.

"I must leave this place. I cannot meet him again; I must go home. But, Oh how can she give him up!"

Edith Loring and Lillian Ames were cousins, but the one was the daughter of a clergyman whose rectory was some ten miles distant from Ames court, and one of the noblest estates of England, and of which Lillian was sole heiress.

The girls, however, had been closely united, more by the tie of friendship than cousinship, since the latter was a distant bond, and Ames court was almost as much Edith's home as her own. Now, however the homelier charms of the rectory were very grateful to her. Here no one could prove the discovery so new to herself—to trace the scarlet blush which seemed so often to burn her cheek, until she wondered that it did not leave its brand.

She had been home six weeks, and twice Oscar Dering had driven over to see her, but she had always denied herself to him on some household pretext, until one morn he overtook her in the road.

She had been busy with thoughts of him, wondering how he had borne his ruptured troth, and reproaching herself for the cowardice which heretofore had forbidden her meeting him, when she heard behind her the quick step of the horse's hoofs. His rider drew rein at her side.

"So I am to find you at last," he said. His voice sounded the same as of old; the bright, cheery tone was unchanged.

"Have you seen Lillie, lately?" she at last found courage to ask.

"No," he answered, and then she saw the frown gather on his brow, and an expression of pain comes about his lips. "I see as little of your cousin as possible now. You know, Miss Loring, I am no longer a subject of congratulation."

"Yes, I know," she said. "I—"

"Don't pity me," he interrupted; "I can't bear that quite yet."

"I did not mean to pity you," she replied.

"Oh, if Lillian had not spoken of the heart caught in the rebound," she thought, when week after week Oscar Dering would find his way to the rectory garden or the rectory parlor, to spend long hours with its fair young mistress.

She understood so well why he came, because now and then Lillian's name drifted into the idle talk, and because, as he grew stronger, he dared speak of her and of the love he had borne her. It was a mingled pain and pleasure to listen. If only she had not learned her own heart the pain would have been less. But she was destined to learn it more fatally, yet, as one morning strolling through the woods together, the sharp report of a hunter's gun close beside them startled them both. The next instant her companion sank white and senseless on the sward beside her, while the affrighted hunter, whose misaimed charge had entered his arm, hastened forward.

"Bring assistance quickly," exclaimed Edith, while she raised the heavy head to her lap: "Oscar, speak to me," she moaned.

"Oscar! Oscar!"

Over and over again she repeated his name in the same accents of despairing love, until they had forced their way into the life-pulses of his being and aroused them to activity.

He opened his eyes in a half-wandering look, as though delirium had overtaken him,

At this instant the hunter returned with assistance, and a half hour later the wounded man had been borne to the rectory, the wound dressed, and the knowledge given that it was merely a flesh wound, painful, but not dangerous. Yet his recovery was a tedious affair.

He grew moody and abstracted. It gave him more time to think of Lillian and his loss, Edith thought, even while she wondered why his eyes followed her with such a strange questioning look. Once she entered his room with some freshly cut flowers in her hand.

"Where shall I put them, Mr. Dering?" she inquired.

"Mr. Dering?" he answered. "Did I not once hear you call me Oscar, or was it a sweet fancy wafted from dreamland?"

Again the crimson tide dyed her face.

"Don't!" she said, as though he had hurt her, and hastened from the room bearing with her the flowers, and it seemed to him the light and sunshine.

Had he been blind all this time, and was he just beginning to see?

A grand ball was to be given at Ames court. Lillian insisted that Edith should be present, and the invalid also was summoned to the feast.

On the evening of Miss Ames's ball she picked up the paper sent down by the afternoon mail from London. She was suddenly startled at seeing the name of the man to whom she so lately had been betrothed.

It was a published decision of the court that owning to some disability, the title could not descend to Oscar Dering's cousin.

He was, then, Lord Dering still. Fool that she had been. But to-night, while he still thought her in ignorance, she must win him back.

It was late when he entered the spacious drawing-rooms.

"I have been waiting for you," she said, in her sweetest, lowest tones.

"You honor me too greatly, Miss Ames," he replied.

"Let us go into the conservatory." she added, "it is cooler there."

He offered her his arm.

From a distant corner of the room Edith saw them.

"I will not begrudge him any happiness," she said to herself.

"Have you forgotten the last time we were here together, Mr. Dering?" Lillian was asking at this moment.

"No," he answered gravely, looking into the beautiful face beside him.

"Can one ever retrieve a mistake," she asked, "when one finds it out?"

"I don't know," he replied. "Can one cause the rose, blighted in mid-summer, to bloom again in the depths of winter?"

She knew then what he meant.

"We are dealing in similes;" she exclaimed, "let us return to our guests."

An hour later Oscar Dering led Miss Loring to the same spot.

"I love you, Edith," he said, "I thought my hearr was dead when I met you. My darling, will you be my wife?"

"Oh, Oscar, you are sure, sure of yourself?"

"I have been made more sure to-night," he answered.

She was too happy to question his words—too happy even to let Miss Ames's congratulations sting her when she said:—

"A heart caught in the rebound. Did I not tell you so."

Too happy to be made happier when she learned that on her wedding day she was to be made Lady Edith Dering.

Curious Sea Inhabitants.

There is a continual warfare going on in the deep, a constant struggle for the means of sustaining life. The carniverous devour the vegetarians, and the mud-eaters swallow both animal and vegetable forms; and this runs all the way down the scale, from the shark and the equally ravenous bluefish to the least of the annelids. These last, the sea-worms, are wary, but they cannot escape their enemies. If they were to confine themselves to the bottom, where they feed and where many of them grow to the length of a foot or two, they might in a measure escape, though they would still be a prey to the scup and other fish that know how to dig for them; but they love to swim, particularly at night and in the breeding season, and then they are snapped up in countless numbers. They have almost every variety of forms and their structure is marvelous—monsters with hooked jaws at the end of a probos is, and withal, sides of bluest green that throw off an infinite variety of irridescent hues. Some of the sea-worms have scales, others have soft bodies; some are sluggish and curl themselve up into balls when disturbed, others are restless, particularly at night; some are round, others flat; some build tubes of sand and cement, woven together till they make a colony of many hundred members; the tubes of others are soft and flexible, and some, when disturbed, withdraw within their crooked calcareous tubes and close the orifice with a plug. One variety of the serpulæ has three dark red eyes; another has clusters of eyes on each tentacle. The amphifiods were accounted of no great value till it was shown by the Fish Commission that these small crustacea furnish a vast amount of food for both salt and fresh-water fishes. Indeed, there is not a creature that swims or crawls that does not become the food of some other animal. A beach flea is caught up by a scup or flounder; squids make terrible havoc among young mackerel, and sharks and sting-rays find something appetizing in the gasteropod.

But we have not room here to dwell on the attractions offered by the invertebrate animals on this coast. The rocky shores abound in varieties differing from the products of sandy and muddy bottoms, and the different zones have their peculiar forms of animal and vegetable life, and one has only to sweep the water with a fine net, and drawing it through the seaweed, to gather an infinite variety of animal life, so minute and delicate in form as only to be seen with the aid of a glass. At the laboratory of the Fish Commission, crabs not bigger than the head of a pin may be seen seen swimming in a shallow dish, tiny forms, almost transparent, but active and pugnacious when they meet each other. These minute animals at this stage are not fully formed, but have a tail, which, when not in use, is drawn up under the body. This appendge, like the caudal one of the tadpole, disappears when the creature has no further need of it. So of the young of the lobster; it has five feet, while the abdominal segments are flattened out into a tail fin. But perhaps there is no greater change in the growth of any of the crustacea, than that which characterizes the star-fish. Its larva seems complete in itself, and its movements are active before it presents any of the aspects of the parent fish. Even its temporary mouth does not remain the permanent mouth of the starfish. It is the starfish that is the great destroyer of oysters, and there is nothing more tenacious of life. Tear off one of its lobes or arms another will grow in its place; tear off two, three—all of its five arms, and it is able to reproduce them all.

Curiosities of a Missouri Cave.

About a year ago Mr. Strein bought a tract of land one mile east of Westport, upon which was a wonderful spring of cool, pure water, which came bubbling from an immense cave which has been explored 3,000 feet from its mouth. Soon after Mr. Strein secured the property he bethought him of raising brook trout, and Mr. Annin, a well-known fish-culturist of Rochester, came to Kansas City to see if the plan was a feasible one. Mr. Annin explored the cave; and after making his way underground about six hundred feet came to a small cataract about three feet high, over which the water fell. In about four hundred yards another waterfall was reached, but at this point a person has to crawl along, as the walls of the cave are very low, the ceiling being ragged and rough. About a year ago, when an investigation of the cave was first made, a lot of old Indian arrow heads of flint were discovered near the first waterfall, and it is said in olden times the Indians used this cave as a sepulchre for their dead before they were sent to the "happy hunting ground." In support of this theory it is known that within thirty yards of the mouth of the cave are the remains of an Indian stone house, where not many years since dwelt a half breed and his aged squaw. They were very reticent as to the use of the cave, but claimed that the water which came from it had certain curative powers which their "medicine men" had discovered ages ago. The people in the neighborhood have all heard the stories, and the place has about it much of interest. Mr. Annin told Mr. Strein that in his opinion the water in the cave was well adapted to raising fish, and on his return from Rochester he sent out three thousand eggs taken from Caledonia creek, near his own home, which have been hatched out successfully.

A Parrot in the Witness Box.

About six months ago a parrot belonging to the Sisters of St. Boniface Convent disappeared, and was recently found in the possession of Pierre Mallet, who lives on Lapeyrouse street, New Orleans. A demand being made upon him he refused to surrender the bird, claiming that he purchased it, and will not give it up unless paid an extravagant price. The Sisters have therefore instuted a suit in the Second Justice's Court to recover their bird, which they value at one hundred dollars. The parrot speaks German fluently, and its owners claim that they will have no difficulty in proving their propriety. Upon the trial the bird is to be brought into court to tell what he knows about kidnapping. The bird is well known to the pupils who attend school at the Convent, and it is said that a test of indentification will consist in the bird's obedience to a certain sign known only to its rightful owner. The trial of this case promises to be both interesting and amusing.

Two Tragedies of Niagara.

More than twenty years ago Niagara witnessed a tragedy which, while of a heart rending character, was marked by an act of true heroism, seldom equalled in grandeur. Mr. Charles Addington, a young man about twenty-three or twenty-four years of age, was affianced to Miss De Forrest, both being residents of Buffalo. One day a happy party, comprising Mrs. De Forrest, Miss De Forrest, a younger daughter, Eva, a beautiful child five or six years old, and "Charley" Addington, as his friends were accustomed to call him, visited the Falls. They crossed the bridge to Goat Island, and while resting under the trees, Little Eva strayed away from the group, and approaching the bank of the narrow, but deep and swift stream that rushes between Goat Island and the small island lying between it and the American rapids, was amusing herself by casting sticks into the water and watching them as they were whirled swiftly away. Mrs. De Forrest alarmed for her child's safety, requested Charles Addington to go after her and bring her back. Charley at once proceeded to the bank, and thinking to give the little one a fright, approached her stealthily from behind, and catching her under the arms, held her over the stream. The startled child threw up her little arms over her head, and instantly she slipped through young Addington's hands and fell into the rapids.

The realization of the horrible calamity must have come home to Addington's brain with the rapidity of the lightning's flash. He saw his rash act had cost the child's life—that only one desperate chance of saving her remained—that the world was at an end for him for him forever. Tearing off his coat he rushed along the bank until he had passed little Eva, who was keeping afloat by her clothing; then plunging in ahead of her, he seized the child and desperately attempted to throw her up the bank. As he made the effort he fell back in the rapids and was whirled over the small fall that intervenes between the American horseshoe falls. Little Eva struck the top of the bank, but all power had apparently gone from her, and she rolled back into the stream and was hurried to her dreadful fate. The mother and sister stood paralyzed with horror, while the tragedy, almost instantaneous in its action, passed before their eyes, leaving its dark cloud hanging over all their future lives. Charles Addington had made a hero's atonement for his thoughtless and reckless act. His father—he was an only son—was in the habit of visiting the falls once a week for years after the tragedy, and he would sit for hours gazing at the spot where his son and little Eva had met their deaths. He became well known at the falls, and there were many who believed that he would one day voluntarily seek the same fate that his son had courted. But his sad pilgrimage had no such ending.

An accident with dramatic accompaniments occurred some years after the sad event that cost Charlie Addington and Eva De Forrest their lives. One morning soon after daybreak, the early risers at the falls discovered something moving on a huge old log or trunk of a tree which for years had shown itself above the boiling rapids on the American side, having become caught by and become firmly wedged into the rocks on its way toward the falls. Looking downward from the bridge this log was and still is in full sight in the fiercest part of the rapids, considerably nearer to the small island on the American side of Goat island than to the American shore. The moving object was soon found to be a man, and it was evident that his boat had been carried over the falls during the night, while he himself had miraculously been cast against the log, by which he had managed to stop his fearful rush toward death. Despatches were immediately sent to the coast life-saving station, and Captain Dorr hastened to Niagara by a special train, carrying with him two metallic life-boats, and plans to save the man were concerted. But before the arrangements were completed the news had spread abroad, and many thousands of persons had reached the falls by special trains. Goat island, the bridge, the American shore, the roofs and windows of all the adjacent buildings and the branches of trees, were covered with anxious and horrified spectators.

The first attempt at rescue was by means of a Francis metallic life-boat attached to a cable which was slacked off from the bridge opposite the log and guided by side ropes. The boat had not got far from the bridge when the fierce rapids seized it, turned it round and round, and appeared to be endeavoring to crush its sides. The strong cable snapped like a whip cord, and the poor fellow who had been watching the effort made for his rescue saw the boat whirled past him and carried over the falls, as if in mockery of his would-be rescuers. Considerable time was then consumed in deliberating on a new plan, and it was proposed to fasten a cable to some building on the American side, to carry it over to the island until it would sag near the log, and then to rescue the man by means of a basket hung on the cable by rings, and to be let down and pulled in by means of smaller ropes. The material for this experiment could not be procured, so at last it was decided to send down a strongly constructed raft in the same manner as the life-boat had been launched, and if that reached the man in safety, to ease it over toward the small island, from whence his rescue would be comparatively easy. The raft was built, but it was four o'clock in the afternoon before all was ready. The day had passed without the flight of time being heeded. The excitement was intense. Men and women who had stood for hours without food were painfully agitated. The raft moved. It withstood bravely the wild assaults of the angry rapids. It neared the log. The man stood up and waved his arms. The raft came within his reach, and he got on to it, ate the food, drank a small quantity of weak brandy and water that had been put aboard, and fastened himself by the lashings that had been prepared and the intent of which he understood. Then the raft was cautiously and steadily moved toward the Island with the precious freight. The people shouted, and many wept from overwrought feeling. Suddenly the raft came to a stand. The rope was taut! It had caught in a rock. To attempt to force it was to risk its parting, and the fatal consequences could not be misunderstood. The poor victim seemed to take in the situation and to grow desperate. He unfastened the lashings; stood up, and made a spring from the raft in the direction of the island, and was in the foaming waters. Instantly he struck out for the island. He seemed to be a powerful swimmer, and thousands of men and women held their breath in horrified suspense. He appeared to near the island in his desperate efforts. Then arose the cry, "He's saved! he's saved!"

But suddenly those on the bridge, who could see more distinctly from their location, became aware that the space between the island and the swimmer's head was widening There was another dreadful moment of suspense, and then the unpitying rapids seized their prey, and apparently making sport of the efforts that had been resorted to to snatch him from their grasp, twisted him round and whirled him along until they hurried him over the precipice. As the poor fellow went over a singular effect was observable. The vast body of falling water curves over the edge of the of the falls like a huge wheel, and as the body was shot forward by the force of the current, it seemed to leap completely out of the water, the feet being visible, before it took the terrible plunge. The death-like silence that had fallen upon the crowd was broken by a fearful cry—a sound mingling a wail, a howl and a shriek in one. Many strong men as well as women fainted. They had witnessed a tragedy more intense in its painfuiness than any drama could present, and one not likely to be soon forgotten.

Powerful Ocean Steamships.

Twenty years ago the largest steamers known (in this, as in all such comparisons, neglecting the Great Eastern, which was a prodigy of engineering skill) did not reach 350 feet in length, 45 feet in breadth, 3,500 tons in tonnage, or 4,000 horse power indicated. We have before us at this moment a list of 50 merchant steamers sailing in the year 1860, from Southamton and other southern ports, which the largest vessels then frequented, and the list includes but 10 ships of more than 300 feet in length, none of which reached the limits of size and power just giving, and the whole of which belonged to two companies—viz., the Royal Mail and the Peninsular and Oriental. At the present moment we have afloat and at work the White Star Liners, some of them 445 feet in length, 45 feet in breadth, and nearly 5,000 indicated horse-power; the Inman Liners, comprising such ships as the City of Berlin, 488 feet by 44½ feet broad, and of about the same steam power; the Orient, of 445 feet by 46½ feet, with engines developing 5,600 horse-power; the Arizona, of about the same size, with still greater steam power and speed; and many other splendid vessels but little inferior to any of the foregoing. And these grand steamers—many of which reach the quays of New York with greater punctuality than railway trains reach the London suburbs from Victoria and Charing-cross, and would reach our quays with equal punctuality if they could avoid the abominable sands that bar the Mersey—are the forerunners of still larger and more powerful vessels now taking shape upon the banks of the Clyde and elsewhere. The Cunard steel ship, the Servia, now building by Messrs. Thompson, of Glasgow, is 500 feet by 50 feet, with over 10,000 indicated horse-power, and will therefore, doubtlesss, possess a speed considerably in advance of that of the very fastest ship at present afloat in the mercantile marine. The Inman steamship City of Rome, building of iron at Barrow, will be still larger, having a length of 546 feet, a breadth of 52 feet, agross registered tonnage of 8,000, and a steam power nearly equal to that of the Servia. The Guion Line is to be increased by ships of almost equal size and power, and the Allan Line is building others equal to the finest of the White Star boats. Notwithstanding the number and magnitude of the passenger steamers now running between America and this country, the traffic is so great that it has only been possible to secure accommodation by arranging passages many weeks, and even months, in advance, while the rapidly increasing population and wealth of the United States and of Canada make it certain that the interchange of agricultural produce and manufactured goods between them and ourselves will go on increasing.

A Dive for Life.

Just below Kanahwa Falls, in West Virginia, is an overhanging rock of immense size, jutting out about one hundred feet over a seething whirlpool and it was once the scene of a remarkable adventure.

The Indians were in hot pursuit of Van Bibber, a settler, and a man of distinction in those early times. He was hard pressed and all access to the river above and below being cut off, he was driven to the jumping rock, which proved to be the jumping off place for him. He stood on the rock, with full view of the enemy above and below, who yelled like demons at the certainty of his capture. He stood up boldly, and with his rifle kept them at bay. As he stood there he looked across the river, saw his friends—his wife and a babe in her arms—all helpless to render assistance. They stood as if petrified with terror and amazement. She cried at the top of her voice:

"Leap into the river and meet me!"

Laying her babe on the grass, she seized the oars and sprang into the skiff alone. As she neared the middle of the river, her husband saw the Indians coming in full force and yelling like demons.

"Wife, Wife!" he screamed, "I'm coming; drop down a little lower.

With this he sprang from his crag and descended like an arrow into the water, feet foremost.

The wife rested on her oars a moment to see him rise to the surface, the little skiff floated like cork, bobbing about on the boiling flood. It was an awful moment; it seemed an age to her. Would he ever rise? Her earnest gaze seemed to penetrate the depth of the water, and she darted her boat further down the stream. He rose near her, in a moment the boat was along side of him, and she helped him to scramble into it amid a shower of arrows and shotthat the Indians poured into them. The daring wife did not speak a word; her husband was more dead than alive, and all depended on her strength being maintained till they could reach the bank. This they did, just where she had started, right where the babe was lying, crowing and laughing. The men pulled the skiff high on the land, and the wife slowly arose and helped to lift Van Bibber to his feet. He could not walk, but she laid him down beside his babe, and then seating herself, she wept wildly, just as any other woman would have done under the circumstances. That babe is now a grandfather and that rock is called "Van Bibber's Rock" to this day."

Osborne House.

Osborne adjoins the estate of Norris Castle, where the Queen spent some time in childhood, and her selection of the place in mature years was probably due to early impressions. The Queen and Prince seem soon to have felt a desire for—what her predecessors on the throne never had—a home of their very own, as opposed to an official home, and the private home of Osborne was soon supplemented by that of Balmoral. It is scarcely probable that a radical House of Commons will be content to vote much longer the great sum annually demanded for maintaining royal palaces at which the sovereign never resides.

Besides Buckingham Palace—where her residence now averages about ten days a year—the Queen has Kew, Hampton Court, Kensington, Busby Park, St. James, the white Lodge in Richmond Park, Frogmore, all at her disposal, should she please to occupy them, and all maintained at public cost, besides Holyrood in Scotland, where occasionally she has spent a few days. Kensington and Hampton Court are now given up in part to pensioners of position. The accumulation of these palaces has been in a considerable decree due to the individual caprice of various sovereigns. William III hated the splendid palace of Whitehall, and was not sorry when fire effaced the triumphs of Holbein and Inigo Jones. He lived at Kensington, and occasionally at Hampton Court. Anne lived at Kensington and Windsor, as did the Georges up to and inclusive of George II. George III and Charlotte lived at St. James, Windsor and Kew until Buckingham House was bought.

George III also lived a great deal at Frogmore, in Windsor Park. For years he did not occupy Windsor Castle. George VI lived, after he came to the throne, at Buckingham Palace, Windsor, and the Pavilion Brighton, and spent on them then, probably, at a rough calculation, $7,500,000. William IV, not at all a representative King lived chiefly at Windsor and Buckingham palaces. So far as Windsor, Hampton Court, Busby and Richmond are concerned, their surroundings are entirely free to the public, who can ride and drive in nearly every part of their parks. Were, however, Kensington Palace, a plain brick building, covering several acres, razed and fine houses erected, the public would not suffer by the loss of a recreation ground, and the public treasury would gain to the extent of a sum nearly covering all allowances paid to the royal family, except that to the Queen.

You Can Skip.

"Is your name David Shaster?" asked the court of a man nearly seven feet high who suddenly walked out on Bijah's arm.

"Hey?" replied the prisoner, as he leaned forward.

"Is your name David Shaster?"

"Hey?"

"Is—your—name—David—Shaster?" repeated the court with all his voice.

"Yes, I suppose it is."

"You are charged with being drunk."

"Hey?"

"You are charged with being drunk."

"Hey?"

"Drunk!" yelled Bijah, with his mouth close to man's ear.

"Who's drunk? What have I got to do with anybody being drunk?"

"You were drunk!" shouted the court.

"Hey?"

"You were drunk!" yelled Bijah.

"Bet you $5." replied the prisoner as he went down for the money.

The officer in the case said he found him lying under a shed, drunk and asleep and the court replied:

"Well, I can't yell my head off to make him understand. I've busted my collar button and broken a suspender already, and I shall let him go. Prisoner you can go."

"Hey?"

"You can skip."

"Hey?"

Bijah turned him around and run him out and shut the door on him, but he put his nose against the glass and shook the door and called out:

"Hey? I'll see if I haven't any rights!"

Loyalty Rewarded.

The French Government has just conferred the military medal upon a young woman employed in the telegraph office at Pithiviers during the war of 1870. Upon the arrival of the German forces in that town during the month of November, they at once, as was their wont, took possession of the telegraph office and relegated Mdlle. Dodu, the young woman in charge, to a room, and Mdlle. Dodu managed to tap them and convey the information to the sub-prepect. One day a telegram arrived from the Prussian staff at Orleans addressed to Prince Frederick Charles, informing him of the march of a French corps upon Gien, and suggesting the movements to be made in order to surround it. This telegram she took to the sub-prefect who made three copies of it for the commander of the French corps, sending each by a different messenger. Two of the messengers were killed, but the third arrived, and the information enabled the French commander to make a timely retreat. The Prussians did not as certain what had taken place until just before the armistice, but for which Mdlle. Dodu might have fared badly.

Things it Would be Funny to See.

A patent medicine that wasn't warranted a dead shot for anything, from corns to consumption.

A rose without a thorn and a woman without a fault.

A tarpaulin stout enough to keep the rain from soaking through the backs of our milkman's cows.

A poor plumber and a rich newspaper man.

A man who can rap eternal smash out of his favorite bunion while making a tight croquet and still keep the air brake on his tongue.

The man who wasn't always able and willing to give an editor a few pointers in the newspaper business.

A doctor who hadn't believed all along that Tanner would come out all right.

A bald headed man who never lost his temper.

A circus just to relieve the monotony.

A chromo of the man who invented the dance called "the racket."

It is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it.

WHAT IT MEANS.

The "glorious victory" which the Republicans achieved over the Democratic party means much more than appears on the surface. It means a drifting towards Imperialism; it means a continuation of the deep official corruption inaugurated by Grant's administration; it means a return to our highest positions of the worst class of political profligates; it means Grant for President in 1884; it means prosperity and increased riches for the professional classes, the capitalists, monopolies, bondholders and political ringsters, and hard toil, low wages for the laborer and mechanic, low prices for the farmer and producer.

The "victory" of Garfield over Hancock is a victory of the low, truckling politician over the pure, noble man, the heroic soldier and patriotic statesman; a victory of political bigotry and stupidity over liberality and intelligenee; a victory of sectionalism over nationality; a victory of corruption over honesty—of hatred and malice over love and good will. This and much more is the "size" of the recent glorious victory?

WHAT NOW?

Disastrous as our defeat seems to be, all is not lost. The Democrats still have a small but decided majority in the U. S. Senate, and the new President can not appoint a single man to office without the "advice and consent of the Senate." We hope that the democratic senate will hang the goose high for Garfield, and suggest that it make full and free use of its constitutional prerogative and not only follow the old accustumed rut of passively consenting to the appointments that Garfield may choose to make, but positively advise whom he may appoint. That will compell him to scan the ranks of his party pretty well for honest, faithful officers.

In the House the Democrats and Greenbackers with democratic proclivities also have a majority, so that th country is secure against hasty or class legislation. Courage, Democrats, the radicals have not quite everything their own way. The Democrats have as much power in the administration of the government as the radicals.

THE SILVER LINING.

It is a comfort to know that a majority of the voters of the United States cast their ballots for the grand, noble Hancock the other Tuesday; and that but for the illogical and anti-democratic electoral system he would to-day be our President-elect, instead of the man who borrows "$329" and sells his official influence as congressman, for $5000.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, D. C. Nov. 5th 1880.

One result of the late election is that the Senate Democrats will retain power to negative improper legislation and to defeat unfit nominations. This is about all the Democrats are now sure of, but this much. General Garfield must have a "policy" relative to the position in the Union of those States known as "the South." He can not shuffle through four years as Mr. Hayes has done. He must take the ground of Senator Conkling and Senator Blaine, which is substantially that such States have not equal rights with other States, or he must take the opposite ground. His expressions of sentiment have been one way on the subject, and h is votes in Congress the other way. He must have a policy about reforms in the civil service, too. He can hardly do as Mr. Hayes has done on this subject, either. The General has written the best statement I have ever seen of the needs of the civil service, but in his letter of acceptance he swallowed it all. He knows there ought to be changes in the tariff, too. He has spoken and voted on every conceivable side of this tarif matter. So, on these three principle questions, it will be seen there is little on which to base anything but a guess as to what the course of the administration will be. But General Garfield, being in a manner elevated above the party, and made the servant of the whole people, and all his ambition for office being gratified, there is no better reason to hope for conservative action from him as President than where he has held any other office.

There are no rumors as to Cabinet selections except such as are unquestionably guess work. Representative Frye, of Maine, is most spoken of as Republican candidate for Speaker of the House.

In the despatches from New York, of the colonization of Republican voters in New York City and Brooklyn, and "several thousand" of them are said to have been sent from this city. I do not know how to account for the decreased Democratic majority there, but I am sure so much of this explanation as refers to this city is erroneous. A great many men, principally negroes, left Washington prior to the election, but they went to different parts of Virginia and Maryland. Whether they voted or got in those States, I don't know, but they could not have voted in New York.

A decision has just been made by the First Comptroller of the Treasury that United States bond which is payable by its terms "to bearer," may be replaced by government when lost by its holder. No Congressional action is necessary.

CARROLL.

A Brilliant Comet Coming.

The Rochester astronomical society announces that the comet discovered by Prof. Swift on Sunday, the 7th uit., promises to become very brilliant. It is coming almost straight toward the earth, and so its positions in the heavens changes slowly. It is in the constellation Pegasus, which is overhead at about 9 o'clock in the evening. It seems to be throwing off a brilliant tail, which will become visible to the naked eye as it swings into the neighborhood of the sun. If this comet fulfils its present promise it will be a magnificient object in the coming winter evenings. Some of the astronomers, it seems, suspect that this may be the great comet that blazed with extraordinary splendor in the western sky just after the war of 1812.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

The defeat of General Hancock is inexplicable to those who appreciate the character of the man and dispassionately compare him with his successful opponent. They cannot conceive such obliquity of moral vision on the part of the people as would select Garfield in preference to Hancock for the chief magistracy of the republic. The solution of the problem nevertheless is not difficult.

1. A majority of the American people have not voted for Garfield
2. More than a million of the votes cast for Garfield were given by an ignorant, superstitious and imbruted race incapable of making an intelligent choice and governed solely by their fears and passions in their action at the polls.
3. Every monopoly favored by class legislation opposed General Hancock.
4. The whole power of the federal administration was thrown into the scale against General Hancock.
5. The Pacific railroad corporations and the Standard Oil Company opposed General Hancock.
6. The management of the campaign was not entrusted by the democratic national committee to General Hancock's real friends, but placed in hands of W. H. Barnum and others who opposed his nomination at Cincinnati and who are mere mercenary politicians.
7. Samuel J. Tilden's indifference and John Kelley's blunders defeated General Hancock in New York and this gave his candidacy the coup de grace.

Nevertheless Garfield is not the choice of a majority of the voters of the United States. He will be a "minority" president and could not have been chosen at all but for the peculiar structure of the electoral system. A direct vote of the people would have defeated him, as the returns will show. and he owes his election after all to the "heresy of States Rights" so much decried by his party.—Patriot.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE is the best and cheapest of the lady's books. It gives more for the money, and combines greater merits, than any other. in short it has the BEST STEEL ENGRAVINGS, BEST COLORED FASHIONS, BEST DRESS PATTERNS, BEST ORIGINAL STORIES, BEST WORK-TABLE PATTERNS, BEST MUSIC, Etc., Etc.

Its immense circulation and long established reputation enables its proprietor to distance all competition. In 1880 a New Feature was introduced, which will be improved on in 1881, being a series of Splendidly Illustrated Articles.

The stories, novelets, &c. in "Peterson" are admitted to be the best published. All the most popular female writers contribute to it. In 1881, about 100 original stories will be given, and in addition SIX COPYRIGHT NOVELETS, by Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, Jane G. Austin, Mary V. Spencer, Sidney Trevor, and that inimitable humorist, the author of "Josiah Allen's wife." The

COLORED STEEL FASHION PLATES

In "Peterson" are ahead of all others. These plates are engraved on steel, TWICE THE USUAL SIZE, and are unequalled for beauty. They will be superbly colored. Also Household and other receipts; articles in Art Embroidery, Flower Culture; in short everything interesting to ladies.

The New Cash Store,

Penn Street, Millheim, Pa.

—A good ten-plate stove for sale at the Journal office.

—Three hundred and fifty new houses are under roof at Milton.

—Lock Haven has a first class stone ware pottery.

—Had a fine rain with considerable storm on Saturday and Sunday.

—The United Pipe Line Company ship 80 0 barrels of oil per day from Jersey Shore.

—Michael Lamey has been up town on Monday. Glad to see him out after so long a confinement.

—Don't fail to read the new advertisement of the Philadelphia Branch Store, Bellefonte, Pa. It sounds like business straight through.

—The job work done in the Journa Office will compare well with any work done elsewhere and the prices are remarkably low. Give us a call.

—The Musser hunting party left early on Monday morning for the mountains. They expect to bring at least several fine deer along on their return.

—A Snyder county man named Strickler, never shaved, never swore, never voted and never walked a mile with any other woman than his mother, in his life.

—The Centre County Pomona Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry will meet at Centre Hall on Tuesday the 16th, of Nov. Three sessions will be held, 10. A. M., 2 and 7 P. M.

—Ayer's Ague Cure is an infallible cure for Fever and Ague in all its forms. The proprietors warrant it, and their word is as good as a U. S. bond. Try it.

—If you have any business in Bellefonte by all means call at Lewin's Philadelphia Branch Store for a suit of clothing, and if you even have no business it will pay well to go anyhow. Lewin has the boss clothing store in the county.

—Mrs. Anna M. Weaver just opened her fall and winter stock of the latest styles of Hats, Bonnets, Flowers, Feathers &c. Ladies, if you desire to have something elegant and tasty in the hat line, Mrs. Weaver's establishment is the place where you can get it. See advertisement.

—Mr. Hayes has issued the usual thanksgivin g proclamation and appointed Thursday, Nov. 25th as the day. We hope it may be generally observed not only as a day of thanksgiving but of humiliation, fasting and prayer, and that Mr. Hayes himself as one of the boss sinners may set a good example in penitence himself.

—The JOURNAL BOOK AND STATIONATY STORE has just received a complete stock of SCHOOL-BOOKS, COPYBOOKS, SLATES, PENCILS, SCHOOL SATCHELS, and everything belonging to a full outfit of a scholar.

Also a large stock of CHALKS and INK. The finest assortment of Paper Envelopes, Papeteries, Blankbooks, Family and Pocket Bibles, Passbooks and Memorandas, a full and elegant lot of Notions and Fancy Goods. Call and examine the goods.

HOLD ON AND LISTEN!—J. Willis Musser is on the road again buying up Calves and Poultry, for which he pays the very highest market price and the solid cash. This is an announcement worth your attention. tf

—We defy any man or boy either to name a single article in the line of clothing or belonging to a gentleman's outfit that Lewin's Philadelphia Branch Store does not keep, and sell as low as can be bought within a radious of fifty miles.

—It is admitted on all hands that the work turned out by Deininger & Musser is second to none made in the central part of the state. While the quality of the stock they use is a superior grade their prices are reasonable and uniform. It is their constant effort to continue to merit the confidence and liberal patronage of the public. 3t.

CHURCH DEDICATION.—On Nov. 21st, 1880, the newly erected church east of Logansville, Sugar Valley, wil be dedicated to the service of the triune God. Bishop T. Bowman, has been engaged and will conduct the services. Preachers and the public are cordially invited to be present on the occasion.

D. P. KLINE,
Pastor.

NEW BARBER SHOP.—The undersigned would hereby inform the public that from this week on he will have his barber shop open every Wednesday and Saturday on the second story of Alexander's building in Millheim, where he is prepared to accomodate his customers with good shaves, hair cutting, &c. A liberal patronage is respectfully solicited. J. C. SPRINGER

A REMEDY FOR EPIZOOTY.—Willis P. Hazzard, Esq., an intelligent farmer living near West Chester, writes to the Philadelphia Public Ledger a short letter, in which he recommends sciced apples added to horses' food, as a preventive or remedy for the cure of the distemper. He states that at its former appearance he knew of whole teams which escapedb y the use ot apples alone. As the fruit is plentiful it would not be difficult to try it.

—REPORT OF MILLHEIM GRAMMAR SCHOOL for the week ending—Nov. 5th 1880. No. of pupils Males—13. Females—17. No. tardy at roll call Males—11. Females 17. Cases of corporal punishment—2. No. of visitors—9. No. of visits by directors—6. No. of addresses by visitors—5.

There are some scholars attending school who are not studying all the necessary branches. Parents, supply your children with the necessary books, and urge them to study them likewise. There is stid room for improvement in every department, and especially so, with regard to scholars being at home in the evening and studying their lessons. Parents remember there is little time for study in school.

WOODWARD CHIPS.

The people of this quiet village accepted the result of the election with true christian fortitude. Not a roar from rampant republicans, not a howl from defeated democrats nor a groan from dying greenbackers disturbed the stillness of the air. Everypody feels that this is a republic, fand that the majority rules, but the minorities need not give up their principles. The campaign is open for '84, Hurrah for—"next."

Mr. G. R. Spigelmyer, the enterprising merchant and greenback champion of this place has just returned from the city, with a full and choice assortment of general merchandise which he is selling at "bottom prices." He runs his store on the cash system, cash or produce. He is a greenbacker, yet it seems but justice to his magnanimous soul to remark that he will accept specie just to please customers.

A protracted meeting has been in progress in the Evangelical church for more than a week. Owing to various circumstances it has not yet come up to the average meeting of that class, neither in point of interest nor result. Without undue reflection upon any one I venture to say that a real, live, solid preacher, just at this juncture would do more to arouse the people and secure the success of the meeting than any other element.

Henry Snyder is ahead in the coon catching business having captured fourteen during the past three weeks. Snyder is a republican of the hardshell variety, and anticipated a trip up Salt river. In view of this event he was getting the coon skins made into a robe to use during the voyage. But since this proposed voyage and picnic up salt river has failed I hope the gentleman may be able to bear up against the disappointment, and do himself no mortal injury.

By Universal Accord.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them, and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

SPRING MILLS ITEMS.

All is quiet since the election.

D. M. Kerlin is now a brakes-man on the rail road. He will be a good one.

Mrs. Burrell and Mrs. Smetzler, who have been visiting friends in Clearfield, are again at home and speak very highly of that section.

J. A. Grenoble is now the sole owner of the tin store. He is an obliging salesman and a good mechanic.

Spring Mills Academy, in charge of Prof. D. M. Wolf, is flourishing. New students come in daily. As a teacher Prof. Wolf has a high reputation.

Last but not by any means least—the wedding of Mr. E. C. Krumrine and Miss Sadie Kerlin. Wish them a world of happiness with the least possible alloy of earthly sorrow.

News Miscellany.

A man named Weimer, of Ebensburg, Butler county, became angered at his daughter, at the breakfast table, and hurled a butcher knife at her. The knife struck the girl on the forehead, inflicting a terrible wound.

A DREADFUL DEED.

A Seventeen Year Old Girl Murdered by Tramps.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Nov. 1.—The township of Hamilton was thrown into a wild state of excitement this morning on finding that the seventeen year old daughter of Samuel Bittender had been murdered, her head being pounded to a jelly. The girl left her home yesterday afternoon to go to Jacob Marsh's to do house work. Her little sisters while on their way to school this morning discovered her by the roadside with her brains scattered over the fence and stones where she lay. There were several tramps in the vicinity early this morning and it is supposed they committed the crime.

A BRUTAL BARTENDER.

He Shoots a Wife who is Looking for Her Husband.

PHILADELPHIA, November 1.—At 2 o'clock this morning Mrs. Sarah M'Manus entered a low drinking saloon at Seventh and Barker streets to look for her husband. Frank Carroll denied that the husband was there, but as Mrs. M'Manus was persistent Carroll drew a pistol and deliberately shot her in the abdomen and the doctors say she cannot live.

A NEW TREATMENT.

The Golden Elixir of Life. Wonderful Cures.

FALLING FROM A BALLOON.

A Gymnast's Plunge from a Trapeze a Thousand Yards from the Ground.

NEW YORK, November 1.—A dispatch from Paris to the Evening Telegram says a frightful and probably unprecedented balloon accident occurred last evening at Curbevoie, near Paris. A large crowd had assembled to witness the novel and perilous ascent of a gymnast called Auguste Navarre, who, with inexplicable fool hardiness had volunteered to perform a number of athletic feats on a trapeze suspended from a Montgolfiere ballon named the Vidouvillaise. Reject ing the advice of bystanders, Navarre refused to allow himself to be tied to the trapeze. There was no car attached to the balloon. At about five o'clock the Vidouvillaise was let loose from its moorings and rose majestically in the air. Navarre, hanging on to the trapeze, appeared quite confident and repeatedly saluted the spectators.

When, however, the balloon had reached a heigth of nearly one thousand yards the crowd was horrified to see him suddenly let go the bar and fall. The tragic decent was watched in breathless excitement. At last the body reached the ground, striking with such force that it made a hole in the earth two feet deep and rebounded four yards. It was crushed and mangled almost beyond recognition. Meanwhile the balloon, freed from its human ballast, shot up with lightning speed and soon disappeared from sight. Late in the evening it burst and fell at Menilmontant, much to the consternation of the inhabitants of that busy Parisian quarter.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY.

Whether regarded as a list of the newspapers of America, as the result of one of the most systematic business enterprises in the United States—that of the Advertising Bureau which publishes it—or as a business and industrial gazetteer of our country, this volume is alike a curiosity. Three hundred and ninety-six pages are given to a list of the newspapersof the United States, arranged alphabetically by States, and by cities and towns in each State each presenting the exact location of the city or town, its population, leading industries, and the papers there published—the list comprising 9,753 distinct Journals. Following this list are nine classified lists of special publications and journals, designed especially for the benefit of advertisers; this being succeeded by nearly five hundred pages of advertisements, thoroughly indexed. When it is remembered that fifteen years ago no such thing as a newspaper directory existed, and that now to accurately give the statistics of the press of our country, demand by advertisers, requires a volume of over 1,000 pages, it shows the gigantic proportions of the business, and the system to which it has been brought by the enterprising firm publishing this Directory.—Samuel L. Boardman, Esq., in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register for October, 1880, Boston, Mass.

Pure Water.—It is the almost invariable custom to judge of a water by the quantity of organic matter it contains, no matter what its origin, and a variation of two or three times a given amount is held to make the difference between a good and a bad water. Professor Huxley gave it as his opinion, speaking as a biologist, "that water may be as pure as can be as regards chemical analysis, and yet, as regards the human body, be as deadly as prussic acid, and on the other hand may be chemically gross and yet do no harm to any one." "I am aware," said he, "that chemists may consider this as a terrible conclusion, but it is true, and if the public are guided by percentages alone they may often be led astray. The real value of a determination of the quality of organic impurity in a water is, that by it a very shrewd notion can be obtained as to what has had access to that water." However startling these statements may be to those who judge of the wholesomeness of a water by the amount of organic matter it may contain, we believe it to be none the less an accurate description of facts. It is within our knowledge that our most wholesome supplies sometimes contain an excess of organic matter, and that the waters which give rise to typhoid fever and other hardly less serious disorders are frequently just those which contain the least, the difference of course being that in the one case the organic matter is innocuous, in the other deadly.

Cure for Night Sweats.—The night perspirations of consumptive persons are a notable factor in the progress of the disease, and many remedies have been tried for them, one of the most effective being sulphate of atropine. This, however, is not always applicable. Recently, in a rebellious case Dr. Kohnhom (a Belgian) thought to use the powder which is employed in the German Army as a remedy for sweating of the feet, and known as staempulver; it contains salicylic acid (three parts) and silicate of magnesia (eighty-seven parts). The effect was remarkable; the night-sweats, which had persisted several months, stopped the first night, and six months after they had not reappeared. Another case was also successfully treated. The method is, rubbing the powder, each evening, over the whole body; if the skin be too dry, a little lard or alcoholic solution of tannin should be rubbed on first. As the powder may provoke coughing the patient should, during application, hold a handkerchief to the mouth and nose.

A Ladies Wish.

"Oh, how I do wish my skin was as clear and soft as yours," said a lady to her friend. "You can easily make it so," answered the friend. "How?" inquired the first lady. "By using Hop Bitters, that makes pure rich blood and blooming health. It did it for me, as you observe." Read of it.—Cairo Bulletin.

Fish Chowder.—The best fish for chowder are haddock and striped bass. Cut the fish in pieces an inch thick and two inches square; take six or eight good sized slices of salt pork; put them in the bottom of an iron pot and fry them till crisped. Take out the pork, leaving the fat, chop the pork fine. Put in the pot a layer of fish a layer of split crackers, some of the chopped pork, a little black and red pepper, a little chopped onion, then another layer of fish split crackers and seasoning. Do this till you have used all your fish. Then just cover your fish with water and stew slowly until it is tender; thicken the gravy with pounded crackers; add ketchup if you like. Boil up the gravy once and pour over the fish; squeeze in the juice of a lemon, add salt if necessary.

Stewed Tomatoes.—Put a bit of butter in a hot saucepan, and after it has melted add the tomatoes pealed and sliced; season with pepper only, cover the saucepan closely, and set it where the tomatoes will stew very slowly, stirring occasionally with a silver or wooden spoon. When sufficiently cooked add salt and butter, and serve hot. Tomatoes should never be cooked in an iron kettle, nor stirred with an iron spoon, as it spoils the color of the fruit.

Cream Tartlets. Make a short paste with one white and three yolks of eggs, one ounce of sugar, one ounce of butter, a pinch of salt and flour, work it lightly, roll it out to the thickness of a quarter of an inch. Line some patty pans with it, fill them with uncooked rice to keep their shape, and bake them in a moderate oven till done. Remove the rice, and fill the tartlets with jam, or with stewed fruit, and on the top put a heaped spoonful of whipped cream.

Vegetine.—The great success of the Vegetine as a cleanser and purifier of the blood is shown beyond a doubt by the great numbers who have taken it and received immediate relief, with such remarkable cures.

Potato Duchesse.—Boil and pass through a seive half a dozen potatoes. There must be no lumps. Add a gill of cream, the yolks of three eggs, pepper, salt, a little chopped parsley and a hint of nutmeg. The mixture must be thoroughly smooth and well amalgamated. Take a tablespoonful at a time, form into a ball, brush on the top slightly with the beaten egg, and set them in the oven until slightly browned.

Potted Veal.—Three and one-half pounds of raw leg of veal, chopped, one heaping tablespoon salt, one heaping tablespoon black pepper, eight heaping tablespoons pounded butter cracker, three heaping tablespoons cream or milk, piece of butter size of an egg, two eggs, one nutmeg; mold into a loaf and put into a pan with a little water and sprinkle over it bits of butter and some more pounded cracker; bake two hours and eat cold.

New England Muffins.—Beat two eggs well with a tablespoonful of butter; add a pint of milk. Take three cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and a half a teaspoonful of salt; sift into the milk and eggs, beat quickly and drop into muffin-rings or gem-pans, leaving room for them to rise; bake immediately in a quick oven.

Spiced Plums.—Four pounds brown sugar, seven pounds plums, one pint cider vinegar, one nutmeg grated, one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, cloves, allspice. Boil all slowly two hours.

In October, when the words are glorious in their scarlet and golden drapery, is the time to seek the Autumn leaves and ferns. A severe Cold is often the result of such pleasure trips. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup always cures Coughs and Colds. Priee 25 cts.

HUMOROUS.

A young lady had been spending the day with a bachelor minister and his sister. The young lady, whose name was Miss Hope, had been much gratified with the kindly treatment received at the good old manse, and on leaving expressed her thanks for the kindness of the minister, making at the same time the remark that she had not yet heard him in the pulpit; but, she continued, "I will be over on the Sabbath to hear you." I shall be very glad to see you, Miss Hope, and, under the interesting circumstances, you might suggest a text for the occasion, and I will do all the justice to it I can." "I will be glad to do that, sir," replied the lady. "How would this one do—'Lay hold upon the Hope set before you?"

One day recently, a prominent business man was about to enter his favorite resort for dinner, he was accosted by an individual with a decidedly careworn expression, who begged that he would assist him to get something to eat. As the man looked like a worthy object of charity, the gentleman told him to go in, and directed the waiter to give him twenty-five cents' worth of food and charge it to his check. After finishing his own dinner the gentleman was proceeding to settle for his check, when, noticing a humorous look on the waiter's face, he asked him what the hungry man had ordered. The reply was: "Five glasses of lager."

Mr. Seth Green, writting of lake and deep-water fishing, insists that there are a dozen fish lost from haste and impatience to one lost because of delay; so long as the line is taut, he says, the fish is not likely to get away. Now we know why we don't have better luck when we go fishing. It is owing to haste and impatience. We pull up too soon—pretty often before we have a bite. We supposed it was because we had forgotten to spit on the bait.

A Gentleman and his wife, with two little girls, evidently twins, about 3 years of age, are seated at one of the tables in the dining-room waiting for their breakfast to be brought to them. One of the little girls, who had been intently observing what was passing, suddenly turned to her sister and said: "Why don't papa say drace?" The reply was: "They ain't dot any Dod in Rochester."

Last Sunday a gentleman went into a drug store and asked to buy a piece of soap. "Can't sell anything but medicines on Sunday." "But, man alive, don't you know that cleanliness is next to godliness?" "Well, I can't help it, if it is." "You don't half try," responded the searcher for soap, as he went out without it.

Snooks was a hard case, but he took a turn about and joined the Church, expecting great spiritual regeneration from the act. Next day he was perambulating his shop in a deep study, and soliloquizing sotto voice, yet so loud as to be overheard by his workmen: "I hain't experienced any conversion." "I don't see any difference." "I don't feel any change, and, d——n it, I don't believe there is any."

Here is a good specimen of the laboriously manufactured joke: "What do you sell those fowls for?" inquired a person of a man attempting to dispose of some chickens of questionable appearance. "I sell them for profits," was the answer. "Thank you for the information that they are prophets," responded the querist; I took them to be patriarchs."

You have seen the driftwood and the froth thrown up on the beach by the ever-advancing, ever-retreating waves? There may be nothing very poetical in the thought, but that is about the appearance of the borders of a sweet young girl's mouth after she has struggled successfully with boiled corn on the cob.

An Iowa schoolmaster knocked down a hornet's nest to use in illustrating a lecture, but if the remarks he made immediately after while kiting across the country were merely those he intended to use in the lecture relative to the hornet's nest—and they certainly referred to the nest—the discourse was one totally unfit for children to hear.

No one who has tried Dobbins Electric Soap, (made by Cragin & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.,) fails to see its wonderful economy. Ask your grocer to get it, and give it a trial.

A rich Scotchman, at the point of death, said to his pastor: "Do you think that if I left £10,000 to the Presbyterian Church my soul w'd be saved?" "I can't promise you anything," answered the good man, after a second thought; "but it's worth trying."

The census returns show that the oldest citizens are found in northern countries. It was always supposed that the oldest inhabitants were only found where newspapers were edited by the most able-bodied liars; but the census has—or have—dissipated a great many illusions.

An American girl who marries an Italian marquis gets on very well until his Serene Highness begins to spend all her money and talk of "her father ze shopkeepaire." Then she fires up and gives him a little 4th of July.

This is the weather in which the boy with a "pineapple cut" wonders whether the absence of necessity for parting his hair in the morning compensates for the discomfort of the extra fly and mosquito bits he receives.

At a Ball-Match-making mamma to her daughter—"Virginia, dear, don't lose sight of that gentleman in mourning; he may be a widower."

An exchange says: "Very few hens lay at the point of death." Perhaps they would if they could see the point.

Forgetfulness of People.

We would not, by enticing headings and others devices lead you into reading of the virtues possessed by Pierce's Celebrated Medicines were it not that we are aware of the forgetfulness of people, and that must be our excuse, dear reader, for again telling you that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is without an equal as a blood-purifier. It cures all humors from the common blotch, pimple, or corruption, to the worst scrofula, fever sore or ulcer. Dr. Pierce's Pellets are a pleasant but efficient cathartic. Sold by druggists.

St. Cloud House, Chicago, Ill.,
Jan. 20th, 1879.

Hon. R V. Pierce, M. D.:

Dear Doctor—I have been using your Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets for liver complaint and general debility. It is impossible to express the gratitude I feel. It is simply wonderful the effect your medicine had have upon me. I am in every way a thousand per cent better.

I am yours gratefully,
J. C. Davidson.

Copies and imitations are acknowledgements of the superior merit and excellence of the genuine article. Worthy and valuable articles are what the frauds are committed against and is a proof of high estimation, very flattering to the originators, but very dangerous and unprofitable to the consumer and demoralizing to the dealer. Beware of counterfeits and see that you only get the genuine Simmon's Liver Regulator, in white wrapper, with the red Z on the face and signature on side of J. H. Zeilin & Co., who have stopped five different practical imitators of this valuable medicine by injunction at law, but still other frauds are in the market, as rascals are not yet all hung.

Mature Animals Early.—There is great economy in so feeding animals for meat, that they will mature early. It has been proved by repeated experiment that less feed is required to make a pound of meat in any animal the younger it is. Take for example a steer fed for beef he will make a far greater gain on a bushel of meal or a given quality of any suitable feed, before he is a year old, than when he has become two years old, and more at that age than when he is three. This being true beyond question, for it is one of the settled matters in farm practice, it is the best economy to feed well, even to force the animal, and bring it to the shambles at the earliest possible period. Bullock, as the English people call them, steers in our own vocabulary, can be made as fat and as meaty at two years thus fed as others at three, fed in the ordinary manner. This makes a saving of the food necessary to keep—not fatten—the animal of the third year; which is in itself a handsome profit. Besides this saving, the beef of a 500 pound steer at two is better than that of the same at a year older. Tender beef is that which is made young and rapidly. The reader will see the double profit in the course recommended. Not only is this the case with the steer, but with the lamb and the pig. In fact the most successful pork-growers slaughter their animals before they reach the end of a year, from eight to ten months being generally considered the most profitable limit. We are aware of the predjudice we are encountering by the assumed. But facts are stubborn, and will not yield to any preconceived opinions. The farmer usually keeps his swine until it is eighteen months old, and does it on the ground of economy; when the fact is, if he would feed well from the first, and not starve the creature all summer to make it fatten when he began to feed, he would see a difference. To make good pork, feed generously always, giving such feed as its nature requires to make growth, and then such fattening feed as the appetite demands, and the result will be better pork and larger profits.

Cause and Effect.

The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. No one can have sound nerves and good health without using Hop Bitters to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and keep the liver and kidneys active, to carry off all the poisonous and waste matter of the system. See other column.—Advance.

My Way.—Give your bees nice, clean hives, any style you wish; keep them in the lower part of the gum or hive until about the third of May, then open your hives so they can go to the honey boxes. Keep in a cool place in the summer. I don't think it is a good plan to let them set in the hot sun. Keep your hives shut up so the mice can not get in. I would keep them a little off of the ground. If you let them swarm you must hive them. To do this nicely I sometimes take a little smoke with me; it seems to tame them. What shall we do when they begin to rob one another? I would put a little board up in front of the hive. Let the edge of the board rest against the hive, and the lower edge be about two inches from the bottom of the hive. Let the board be long enough to come out to each side of the hive; close up the entrance so there is no room for the thieves to get in, only at the bottom, and you will not have any trouble, for when bees go to hive they take a straight cut, and if they have to go to the end of this little board they will not bother them.

"It's just what I've been looking for,
Since I've been seventeen—
And getting balder every day
Till I got Carboline."

The Hessian Fly.—An effective method of avoiding the Hessian fly is to prepare the land early and sow a bushel or two of oats or barley. As soon as this comes up the fly will lay its eggs upon the stalks. The day before the wheat is sown ground should be worked with a cultivator of hevy harrow, which will cover the young plants and bury them and destroy the young fly. Then the wheat may be sown. This avoids the danger of the fly waiting some days to deposit its eggs for want of a proper nest for them.

No woman, however nervous, has a right to wake up her husband from a sound sleep to tell him on inquiring what's the matter, "Nothing, only I wanted to know if you were awake."

Don't Temporize With Piles.

Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only ABSOLUTELY INFALLIBLE cure for this painful disease is "ANAKESIS," discovered by Dr. Silsbee. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years. It affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it. Vegetine.

More to Me than Gold.

Walpole, Mass., March 7, 1880.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

I wish to inform you what Vegetine has done for me. I have been troubled with Erysipelas Humor for more than 30 years in my limbs and other parts of my body, and have been a great sufferer. I commenced taking Vegetine one year ago last August and can truly say it has done more for me than any other medicine. I seem to be perfectly free from this humor and can recommend it to every one. Would not be without this medicine—'tis more to me than gold—and I feel it will prove a blessing to others as it has to me.

Yours, most respectfully,
Mrs. David Clark.

J. BENTLEY, M. D., says:

It has done more good than all medical treatment.

Newmarket, Ont., Feb. 9, 1880.

Mr. H. R. Stevens, Boston, Mass.

Sir—I have sold during the past year a considerable quantity of your Vegetine, and I believe, in all cases it has given satisfaction. In one case, a delicate young lady of about 17 years was much benefited by its use. Her parents informed me that it had done her more good than all the medical treatment to which she had previously been subjected.

Yours, respectfully,
J. Bentley, M. D.

Loudly in its Praise.

Toronto, Ont., March 3, 1880.

H. R. Stevens, Boston:

Dear Sir—Considering the short time that Vegetine has been before the public here, it sells well as a blood purifier, and for troubles arising from a sluggish or torpid liver, it is a first-class medicine. Our customers speak loudly in its praise.

KIDNEY DISEASES, CONSTIPATION AND PILES.

are quickly and surely cured by the use of KIDNEY-WORT. This new and wonderful remedy which is having such an immense sale in all parts of the country, works on natural principles. It restores strength and tone to the diseased organs, and through them cleanses the system of accumulated and poisonous humors. Kidney diseases of thirty years standing have been cured, also Piles, Constipation, Rheumatism, &c., which have distressed the victims for years. We have volumes of testimony of its wonderful curative power. No longer use Alcholic Bitters, which do more harm than good, or drastic pills, but use natures remedy, KIDNEY-WORT, and health will be quickly regained. Get it of your Druggist, Price, $1. (Will send post paid.)
